

The delivery of cargoes by sea transport is the most economical option for the transportation of goods over large distances. This kind of transportation considerably reduces shipping costs in the goods value and allows to compete on different commodity markets.

The cargo transportation by sea-service containers has a number of benefits. One of the most important advantages when transport by sea is the safety delivery of the goods without overloaded from one vehicle to another. The goods are in a closed and sealed railroad container during the whole time of delivery. In addition, the nowadays developed system of shipping minimizes crash accidents during the delivery of sea-service containers, enlarging the guarantee on a safe transportation.

Today, the international sea-service container deliveries are one of the most dynamically developing types of sea cargo transportation.
